Helen & Naoise Sargeant, Mummy's Tummy, indian ink and pencil in a book, 2015

Me and my youngest son Naoise (aged six) played a drawing game in a book. He drew babies in the tummy's of my mummy's and I drew babies in the tummy's of his mummy's.

Helen Sargeant , Birth: Icon Drawings 1, 11, 111, Water Colour & Pencil on Paper, 15cm x 10cm, 2011

These drawings seek to to visually expose the physical and emotional experiences of birth. To consider both the vulnerability of the mother and that of the child. They also seek to represent the carers of the birthing mother be it midwife, doula, partner, family or friend. In one drawing the midwives gloved hands are represented gently holding the weight of the babies head as it is delivered.
